

Business college wins national awards

By Anne Johnson

The UNO College of Business Administration has been selected to receive two $10,000 awards from the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business (AACSB).

According to Dean Larry Trussell, the awards will be presented to the college's "Nebraska Rural Communities Program," and the educational TV series "Women's Business: The Entrepreneurial Woman and How to Become One."

Organized in 1916, the AACSB is the professional organization to which most major business schools belong.

Each year the organization gives three major competitive awards to member schools in recognition of programming excellence.

"This is the first time that one institution has been given two awards in the same year," said Trussell.

The rural communities program, directed by David Ambrose, professor and chairperson of marketing at UNO, will receive the Exxon Award. The award recognizes innovation in graduate education for business and management.

UNO is the sixth recipient of the award, said Trussell. Past winners include Harvard, the University of California-

Berkeley, and the University of Michigan.

MBA students

According to Trussell, Ambrose developed the Nebraska Rural Communities program in 1977. The program is part of the business policy course required for the master of business administration degree.

MBA candidates who take the business policy course during the summer session visit a rural Nebraska community for two weeks and evaluate businesses within the community.

Each student is given a primary and a secondary business to analyze, said Trussell. The student is responsible for complete analysis of the primary business and assists another student with the analysis of the secondary business.

Trussell said students study all aspects of the business including location, advertising, company policies, financial analysis, and financial projections.

"It is more than a two-week project," said Trussell. The class meets before going into the community and does background research. After leaving the community, students further evaluate the businesses and prepare management reports which average 150 pages and include five-year forecasts for each business.

Since 1977, 180 students and 180 businesses in six Nebraska communities — Superior, Aurora, Scottsbluff, Norfolk, Seward and Beatrice — have participated in the program.

Steve Caswell, vice president for corporate planning and development for Commercial Federal Savings and Loan, participated in the program in Seward last summer.

Practical

Caswell, who analyzed the Seward Country Club and a mortuary, said the program is "a very practical test of what you know. This is a real-life situation and not just theory in a textbook. We take everything we have learned in the MBA program and put it to use."

Trussell said response from businesses which have participated in the program has been very positive. Businesses implement most, if not all, of the students' suggestions, he said.

"The program is effective," said Cindi Neuirth, an employee of the ABC Nursery in Scottsbluff, one of the businesses evaluated by the students. "Sometimes you have a problem in front of your face and it takes someone else to help you see it."

Neuirth and her husband James, a former UNO business student and current owner of the nursery, participated in the program in 1979.

They implemented some of the students' suggestions for improving the nursery's shortage of parking spaces, and for repricing the merchandise.

Trussell said Beatrice is the chosen site for this summer's class of 24 students. He added that the department is considering the possibility of adapting the program to include Omaha.

The business college became the third recipient of the AACSB Committee on Equal Opportunity for Women Innovation Award, which is funded by the Business and Professional Women's Foundation and the Sears-Roebuck Foundation.

The non-credit program was designed and taught by Robert Bernier, director of the Nebraska Business Development Center at UNO.

Television

Bernier's program began as a 13-week television series designed to focus on how women have become successful in business. Programs aired January-March 1981 as part of UNO's "TV Classroom" series on KYNE-TV (Channel 26) and KMTV (Channel 3).

Each program featured a videotaped interview with a successful businesswoman, and a studio discussion with two other businesswomen.

Positive response to the television programs led to individual classroom instruction in cooperation with the Omaha chapter of the National Association of Women Business Owners.

A workbook was prepared to supplement the videotaped material, and programs were held in the Peter Kiewit Conference Center.

More than 70 women participated in the November-December 1981 sessions, and more than 400 women participated in the January-February 1982 sessions, has decided to start their own businesses, Bernier said.

The program is now being offered in Kearney and will later be offered in Chadron and Alliance, he added.

Trussell, Ambrose and Bernier will attend the annual meeting of the AACSB next week in Hawaii to accept the awards.

"Students should feel good about these awards," said Trussell. "They can be assured that our programs are as good as anywhere else."

He said the $20,000 will be used to develop other innovative and creative business programs at UNO.

Candidates file for CAO, agency posts

By Gary DiSilvestro

The administration and operation of Student Government (SG-UNO) and a number of student agencies will be placed into new hands at tomorrow night's Student Senate meeting.

Senators will be selecting a new Chief Administrative Officer (CAO) for SG-UNO and new directors for four of the five student agencies.

Speaker Greg Mertz said he plans to bring five applicants before the senate and let his colleagues choose the replacement for outgoing CAO Sandy Winschief.

She said senators should appoint someone who has a lot of time and can be unbiased in the performance of assigned duties. She said she would help to train her replacement.

Mertz said he has sent copies of the applications to current agency directors and hopes to get their opinions.

Sens. Jim Ward, Don Carlson, Charles Polk and Steve Montag have all applied for the position. Also applying for the post is UNO student Evonne Duke, a newcomer to Student Government.

Carlson has said he may drop out of the race and endorse another candidate.

Ward is viewed as the popular choice among some senators, according to sources who also say that Duke's strength comes from her status as a relative outsider.

Winschief said she will be recommending the appointments of the four new agency directors.

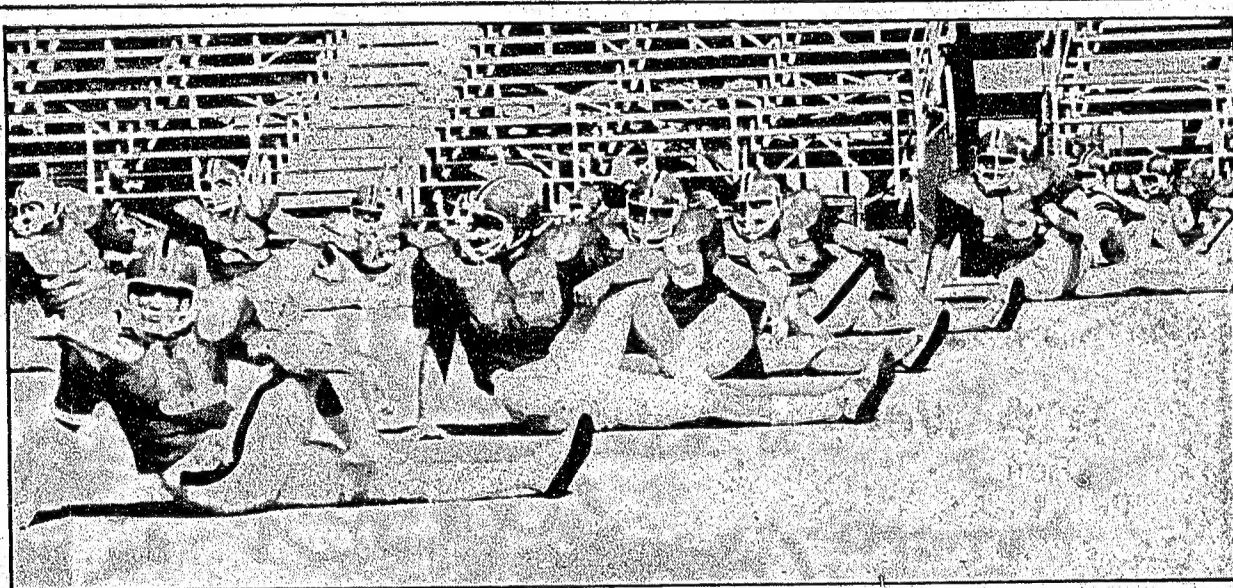

The office of the director of the International Students Services drew the most applicants. The five interested in the position include the current director, Shekar Padath. Also applying for the post are Mustafa J. Ahmed, Pirandeh Kia, Ernest K. Baiden and Joseph Collins.

Seeking the directorship of the Student Programming Organization are two people who have served on the SPO board. Competing for the post are Bernie L. Williamson and Gayle Spencer.

Carol Powell Rodriguez, John L. Pappan and Michael B. Garrison have applied for the post of director of the United Minority Students office.

The current director of the Women's Resource Center, Beth Arnold, is likely to be re-appointed since she is the only applicant for the position.

The Student Senate meets tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the Council Room of the Milo Bail Student Center.

A chance to beat somebody from Campus Security. An opportunity to turn the tables and put Vice Chancellor Richard Hoover behind the eight ball.

Hoover, and Dave Castilow, assistant director of Campus Security, will join a number of other UNO faculty and staff members today who will accept challenges from students to play games of pool or ping pong.

The challenge games are part of the celebration of Paul Beck Scholarship Day. All the funds raised from a variety of activities will go to the scholarship named after Beck, a former UNO history professor and winner of the Great Teacher Award.

"We're shooting to raise $750 this year," said Al Karle, manager of the Milo Bail Student Center, site of the event. A similar event last year raised approximately $500, according to Karle.

Other campus pool sharks who will be rolling up their sleeves in the MBSC games room include head football coach Sandy Buda, MBSC Director Don Skeahan, Women's Athletics Coordinator Connie Claussen, Doug Paterson, associate professor of theater, and Lori Novicki, a UNO student and Miss Nebraska.

Each game will cost the challenger $1, with proceeds going to the scholarship fund. Winners will get a certificate saying they "beat the best," Karle said.

UNO professors will serve lunch in the Continental Dining Room from 10:30 a.m. till 1 p.m.

MBSC staff members will be on hand in the Ballroom from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m., serving pizza and pop for $1.

The UNO Jazz Band will also provide a free concert in the Nebraska Room.

Outside the Nebraska Room, Keith Ninemire, associate director of financial aids, will sell fresh popcorn.

Karle said people should "have a good time and help out a worthy cause."

Film series highlights careers of famous Nebraskans

By Anne Pritchard

During a scene in the film "Last Tango in Paris," Marlon Brando reminisces about actual people and events he experienced while growing up in the Midwest.

"Roots, family and early life go into an actor's screen roles because it becomes a part of them," said Bernard Timberg, assistant professor of communication at UNO.

Timberg is also project director of Nebraskans in Film, a nonprofit organization working with the UNO Communication Workshop to produce a series of 13 half-hour discussion programs called "Midwest Roots — Hollywood Dreams."

The programs trace the lives of such Nebraska luminaries as Robert Taylor, Dorothy McGuire, Marlon Brando, Henry Fonda, Fred Astaire, Harry Langdon, and Harold Lloyd, among others.

The programs follow a talk-show format, with Timberg as host. Various guest speakers discuss highlights of the actors' lives, accompanied by film clips, slides and pictures.

According to Timberg, the project originally was intended to be one film, but the organization did not have enough money for a major production.

However, grants from the Nebraska Committee for the Humanities, the Nebraska State Historical Society Foundation, and the Nebraska Arts Council enabled Nebraskans in Film to conduct extensive research and document information about the Midwest's contributions to American film.

The UNO Communication Workshop, a continuing education class, is responsible for coordinating, producing and directing the 13 discussion programs.

"We wanted to find a good way to make our information available to the public, so they could rediscover their own history," said Timberg.

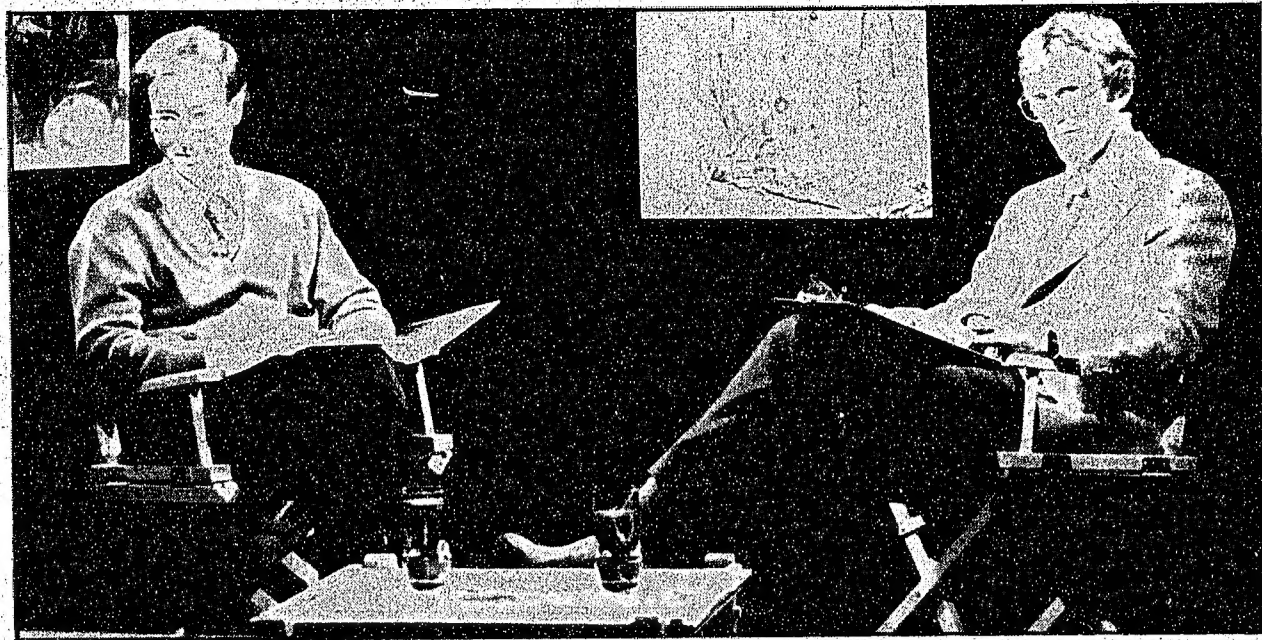

He said the discussion programs will be aired through the "TV Classroom" series, which is supported by the College of Continuing Studies.

TV Classroom crews are comprised of UNO students who have completed basic and advanced television classes.

When the series is completed, according to Timberg, the Nebraska Historical Society will receive tapes of each of the programs. The tapes will be available to the public on a viewing or loan basis.

He said a manuscript containing extensive information about each of the program topics also will be available to the public at the historical society.

The television series began last Thursday and airs through July 16 on Channels 26 and 3.

News Briefs

Carl Vittitoe, manager of central issue, Campus Recreation, has been selected as UNO's employee of the month for April. Letters of nomination focused upon his helpfulness, professional job performance, and his personality. In recognition of Vittitoe, Chancellor Del Weber presented him with a framed citation and gift certificates.

The UNO Maverick Football Awards Banquet will be held at 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Milo Bail Student Center Nebraska Room. For the first time, the event will be open to the public.

Deadline for submitting proposals for the second annual Kelly Instructional Research Symposium is today. Twelve UNO faculty members will be selected to participate in the May symposium, sponsored by the Center for Improvement of Instruction. Each participant will meet with a recognized instructional researcher. A $500 grant for professional travel will be awarded to each project author. For more information, called Daniel Blanke at 554-2670.

National Urban League President John E. Jacob will speak at 2:30 p.m. today in the MBSC Ballroom. He will address strategies for closing the gap between those in need and those in places of economic or political power.

The Nebraska Business Development Center (NBDC) at UNO helped small businesses in the state achieve more than $3.5 million in added sales last year, according to NBDC Director Robert Bernier.

The center is a division of the College of Business Administration. It provides management assistance to small businesses.

CBA faculty, graduate students, and upperclassmen serve as consultants through the program, which is funded by a grant from the U.S. Small Business Administration and a state appropriation to UNO.

Comment

Too much sun, Ron?

Hey kids. Don't worry. All that talk you heard about the student loan cuts is just a bunch of bull.

Just got back from the Caribbean, where Ron and Nancy are on a "working vacation." The president told all the folks down there that there is a "great misconception" about his policies.

"We haven't cut loans," he said. "We've cut the cost to taxpayers of making these loans available."

Ron knows what he's talking about, as is usually the case when he goes on the radio with a "surfside chat" for the natives.

Perhaps he should make the same statements in person on any college campus in the nation. It seems American students have a slightly different view of this man's commitment to education.

But of course Reagan had a good reason to deliver a speech on loans to American students from the surf of the Caribbean. White House Spokesman Larry Speakes said: "He wanted to talk about student loans, so he did."

Back on American soil, Sen. Carl Levin of Michigan shot holes in Reagan's facade. Levin noted that the administration's proposals would aid 1.9 million fewer students by academic year 1988-89.

Well, enough of this. Besides, Ron has to get back to sunning himself, and Nancy has to catch up on the latest gossip at Claudette Colbert's beach villa. We shouldn't pick on the president when he is on vacation. Of course, it's hard to tell any more when he is working and when he is playing.

* * * * *

We are impressed with the applicants for the positions of directors for the Student Government agencies. We want to congratulate Beth Arnold on what will inevitably be her re-appointment as director of the Women's Resource Center.

The WRC is an agency with a tradition of dedicated and courageous directors, and Arnold is no exception.

Arnold has shown ingenuity and enterprise in the implementation of new programs, including the development of support groups for male clients.

We wish Arnold the best in her future work at the center.

We also want to wish the best of luck to the Student Senate in its selection of a new Chief Administrative Officer (CAO).

The CAO can be one of the most influential and powerful positions in the Student Government. We urge the senators to show great care in the selection of Sandy Winschief's replacement. We think there are clear choices, and that each of the five applicants offer obvious advantages or disadvantages. We hope reason outweighs emotion in all of the selections facing the senate tomorrow night.

Bishop protests 'sacred' subs

Nicholas von Hoffman

The Roman Catholic Bishop of Corpus Christi, Texas, got put in his place recently by a co-religionist, Secretary of the Navy John Lehman. Misguided prelate that he is, Bishop Thomas J. Drury had written protesting the naming of a nuclear-powered submarine after his city.

He should have been honored for this one helluva submarine. Your Excellency, this is a Trident submarine that can fire over 400 nuclear rockets. Bishop, that sub has kill-power approximately equal to 15,000 antique, obsolete, Hiroshima-type people-poppers.

Can any American, particularly any Christian American, not agree with Mr. Lehman, who wrote the bishop that "I must... express to you my concern as a Catholic with the theme that seems to underlie this issue; that naval ships and even military service are somehow profane and less worthy of association with the Sacred Name than, for example, the city itself. I cannot accept such an implication."

The real objection to naming so magnificent a killing machine Corpus Christi is that it isn't American palaver. That's Latin, which is foreign and possibly dangerous. It's a wonderful name, but translate it into English so that the submarine becomes the U.S.S. Body of Christ. Jesus would be tickled pink... well, not pink.

It would be a spur to piety and patriotism to give all new Trident subs names with a little bit of religion in them: The U.S.S. Trinity, the U.S.S. Star of David, the U.S.S. Holy Mother. We might name an aircraft carrier the U.S.S. Nine Commandments. (The one commandment having to do with not zapping other humans has been suspended for the duration of the national security emergency under Executive Order No. 29,987).

There are all kinds of names you can give an atomic bomb. You might call one Big Mama. That would show a streetwise insouciance. We might name one the George F. Will, in recognition that some people in the mass media realize the need to defend our country.

Yet when given the awesome nature of this weapon it would seem more appropriate to name these little ticklers with monickers that bring the eternal truths to mind. The Army does have a plane, about that. Generally, though, the armed forces give their weapons irreverently ferocious names which the Fairchild AU-23A, which it has dubbed the Peacemaker, but there's a suggestion of double-entendre.

Read this list of names of various weapons: Dragonfly, Sidewinder, Delta Dagger, Thunderchief, Thunderstreak and Thunderflash (never quit when you're on a winning roll) or Stinger, Stallion, Mohawk, Seminole (Native Americans are regarded as outstandingly carnivorous in the Pentagon), and Viking.

For reasons doubtless having to do with national security, ethnic groups other than Indians and Vikings don't get weapons named after them. We don't have a battle tank named the Negro for instance, nor a howitzer named the Italian or a poison gas called the Hispanic. Too bad. If our weapons were identified with our family roots a lot more people might get into killing than is now the case. In honor of Bishop Drury we could think of calling some new bacteriological warfare agent Celtic Pride.

Still, it would help if we could get people to link up those weapons with their most cherished values. Wouldn't you like to see our 200-kiloton nuclear cruise missiles with names like Faith, Hope, Charity and Shalom?

People wouldn't grow up with a sissified aversion to war if they'd been exposed to weapons when they were young. War toys are some help, but think how much more enthusiastic little children would be if we named one of those new battleships our president wants to build the U.S.S. Bambi.

Bombs away, Bishop.

Q: Do you favor or oppose stricter laws for gun control?

Paul Maul, Grad. Business

"I favor stricter gun laws. Empirical data suggests more guns in circulation leads to more violence."

Terry Jenson, Fresh. Accounting

"Oppose. I don't consider gun control for private citizens to have any crime prevention value."

Clarence H. Walker, Grad. Communication

"I favor stricter laws for gun control, but I'm not sure enforcement of those laws is possible."

Steve Huettner, Sr. Finance

"I would oppose. If you control guns, ultimately the only people who will have guns are the crooks."

Connie Bryant, Jr. Education

"I would not want it to get to the point where you can't buy a gun for sporting, or there is government intrusion."

Joffrey II dancers lack intensity

We all know dance students usually begin their day with exercises at the bar, performing their routines to stylized classical motifs.

Well, dance students attending the Joffrey II master ballet class in the HPER dance lab April 6 were required to dance to a little different tune. Lance Westergard, a ballet instructor, dancer, and choreographer who accompanied the troupe on its Midwest tour, was responsible for the change in routine.

Instead of serene classical allegros, Westergard sang "Take me out to the ball game," and had the students singing it, too. When later asked about the reason for his unusual approach, he said it eased body tension, helped students draw on energy deep from within, and made the class more enjoyable.

Westergard's unique approach and candid manner were suprisingly refreshing coming from a troupe that refused to allow local reporters and photographers into its rehearsals or to interview dancers without going through the company's New York offices first.

Evidently, these precautions were due to the appearance of Ron Reagan (President Reagan's son) in the program.

The April 6 performance at the Orpheum by the Joffrey II was entertaining but, unfortunately, lacked the excitement and intensity we've come to expect from other touring groups.

The evening began with "Madrigal," choreographed by Jean Pierre Bonnefous. This laborious work, set to Elizabethan music, featured three couples in Renaissance attire. The long lush gowns worn by the women seemed to hinder their leg movements and concealed some delicate pointe work. The piece began at a slow pace but then gradually extinguished its own fire.

"Forbidden Flights," in contrast, was exciting and well-received by the audience. The disappointment of "Madrigal" was quickly forgotten with "Flights." Leslie-Jane Pessemier created ballet of lyrical abandon to music by Albert Glinsky. The piece incorporated lifts and spirals throughout, and concluded with one spectacular feathery flight off stage by one of the women dancers.

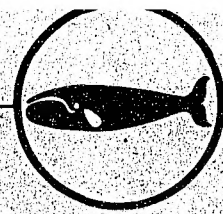

Beautiful costumes and lighting set a scene of romance for the next piece from the wedding pas de deux from "Coppelia." Reagan and Annette Bressie performed well together, each demonstrating fine technique and a sensitivity for the classical roles.

The fourth and final piece in the program offered a drastically different mood. "Threads from a String of Swing" took a nostalgic trip down big band memory lane. Daryl Gray set the work to music by Glenn Miller. Complete with bobby socks, ponytails, party streamers, and a ballroom globe, three couples kicked up their heels to a variety of balletic-jitterbug combinations.

This lively piece captured the essence of the era and was well received by the audience.

It was obvious, however, that the audience was not overly enthusiastic about the troupe. Joffrey II displayed superb dance technique, but too often dancers seemed to lack the depth and intensity of their roles.

Shades of things to come . . . Mark McManigal (center) is tackled by strong safety Tim Slobodnik before a later tackle leaves McManigal injured.

McManigal injured; offense loses punch

The second spring football scrimmage of the year may change the UNO Mavericks' depth chart. Some of those changes may not be welcome.

The defense looked strong Saturday, as the offense scored only 10 points. However, the offense suffered four injuries.

The injury that may cause the most trouble for the Mavericks is a knee injury that sidelined starting quarterback Mark McManigal. Emotions were running high — in the stands and on the field — after McManigal was tackled, and while he was being helped off the field.

The tension that resulted from the injury may have contributed to a brief fight that broke out between an offensive and defensive player on an ensuing play.

A decision was to have been made Monday as to whether McManigal would have to undergo surgery. The knee injury could keep McManigal out of the remainder of spring practice.

The other injuries include leg injuries for running backs Tony Evans and Brent Craft. Mark Gurley, also a running back, injured his heel. The only defensive player hurt was noseguard Mark Brum-

McManigal passed to junior running back Larry Barnett for the game's only touchdown. Barnett scrambled for the extra yardage and the goal line. The play covered 52 yards. The extra point was provided by junior punter/kicker Jeff Pate.

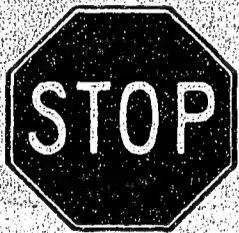

He shared the punting duties with junior college transfer Phil Montandon, who provided the game's other points with a 37-yard field goal. Also seeing action was punter Scott Wilson.

Barnett caught five passes for 76 yards and rushed for another 40.

McManigal gained 93 yards on six completed passes. Sophomore quarterback Randy Naran completed 14 of 26 passes for 105 yards, and Mark Sanchez hit 6 of 15 for 85 yards.

Naran threw the game's two interceptions. Both came near the end of the two and one-half hour scrimmage, after McManigal's injury.

The next scrimmage is scheduled for Friday at 4 p.m.

and GO to an ALL SCHOOL PARTY

Maverick baseball team sweeps Sioux home

By Henry Cordes

The UNO baseball team's first four wins of the 1982 season were all of the come-from-behind variety.

The Mavs finally broke the string Saturday, when its nine-run first inning helped down North Dakota 13-3 and complete a double-header sweep of the Sioux. UNO won the opener 9-5.

"We're not afraid to get behind," UNO baseball coach Bob Gates said, "but we'd much rather have the nine-run lead."

Along with the split of a double-header with North Dakota State Friday, the sweep gave UNO a 3-1 start on its North Central Conference mark and raised its overall mark to 5-9.

In the big first inning on Saturday, UNO took advantage of three North Dakota errors, all by shortstop Scott Boe, to score five unearned runs.

The Mavs sent 13 men to the plate, with Myron Bissen and Jeff Banghart each rapping out two hits in the inning, and Bissen scoring twice.

Catcher Rick Stambaugh delivered the key hit of the inning, a bases loaded triple that gave UNO a 7-0 lead.

The Sioux finally ended the threat when Banghart was cut down at the plate trying to score on team captain Dave Poulicek's fly to right.

"If you get a big inning like that early, it takes so much away from the other team," Gates said. "They can't hit and run, they can't sacrifice, and we can take all the chances we want."

UNO didn't need to take many chances the rest of the way, picking up runs in the second and third to win by the 10-run rule after the fifth inning.

Mav starter Lonnie Pegg sat comfortably on the lead, striking out six in 4 2/3 innings of work to take the win in his first decision of the year.

Jeff Goetz was the offensive star of the opener Saturday, going three-for-three with a sacrifice fly and three RBIs.

His RBI double in the fifth gave the Mavs a 7-5 lead and chased Sioux starter Doug Hellum. Poulicek then greeted reliever Mike Meade with a 420-foot homer to left-center field.

Junior reliever Glenn Schuetze was credited with the win after holding the Sioux scoreless for the last 2 1/3 innings on just one hit. His mark was evened at 1-1.

UNO got its best pitching of the season on Friday but still only managed a split of the doubleheader with NDSU.

Sophomore Joe Mancuso lost a 2-1 decision in the opener. He threw seven innings of five-hit ball, surrendering only one earned run. The error that cost him the game was his own, when he threw wildly to first base in the fourth.

Freshman right-hander Perry Fisher fashioned a seven-hitter to take an 8-3 win in the nightcap, his first decision of the year.

He was given all the offensive support he needed in the first, when the Mavs erupted for six runs behind Poulicek's two-run double and a homer by Kirk Nelson.

Bissen's pinch homer in the sixth finished UNO scoring.

Gates said a 3-1 mark is a good start for the conference season, but he was hoping for better.

"I hoped we would win all four," he said. "We played good ball in all four games. We just didn't hit in that first one."

Gates said a 16-4 conference record will be needed to win the NCC, so the early loss at home could prove costly. "We made it a little tough with the loss. We realize now we'll have to battle all the way," he said.

"Every game is important now that we have a (conference) loss," Gates said. "South Dakota (UNO's next opponent) was fifth in the poll, but we find that that doesn't make any difference. They knocked us off two years ago. You don't count on anyone being easy."

Track teams find Kansas' reception warmer than Iowa's

When the weather turned bad this past weekend, the UNO track teams headed south. They accepted a last-minute invitation from Kansas State University in Manhattan, Kan., after snowstorms in Iowa canceled the women's Drake Invitational and the men's Iowa Invitational.

Kansas Wesleyan and Kansas University also competed in the unscored meet. "We want people to know that we gave them a good run," said women's track coach Bob Condon. He said the Lady Mavs would've finished second if scores had been kept.

And with four first places, five second places, and six third places taken in the events, there is the possibility Condon is right.

The only individual on the men's team to take first place was Mike Jones, in both the 1,500-meter and 800-meter runs.

Both track teams will be at home this weekend as they host the UNO Invitational. Teams expected to compete are South Dakota State, Midland College, Nebraska Wesleyan, South Dakota, Augustana and McCallister, Kan.

Carpoolers Renewal Time

Individuals wishing to carpool during the summer will need to purchase a valid Carpool Permit prior to June 7, 1982. The purchase price will be the same, $18.00 for three or more persons/vehicles. All Carpool spaces not used for Carpools this summer will be converted to use by students with valid parking permits.

Bicycles — Racks Only

Although it may not seem like Spring as I write this column, with big snowflakes all around, bicyclers are requested to use the bicycle racks for parking their two-wheelers. Chaining them to posts, trees, doors, etc., is illegal and could result in removal by Campus Security Officers.

Bicycles parked legally, in bicycle racks, are given special attention by Security Officers to prevent theft. However, when they are scattered around various areas it is more difficult to keep track of them. Help us help you by parking them in the bicycle racks. Thank you.

Tidbits

Parking for Aksarben shuttlebus participants shifts to the southeast corner (area) of the large lot on Tuesday, April 27, when the racing season begins.

— The shuttlebus will not run after April 30, 1982.

— There are still a few slots for the Motorcycle Rider Instruction course, April 30 and May 1-2. Twenty hours of instruction for $10.00 seems to be worthwhile. The savings in insurance, etc., could more than off-set the cost of the course. Call x2648 for more information.
